A Mending Migration

In less than a month a few of the Epiphany Senior High youth, along with Benno, Sy Burnett, and myself will head to Chicago for our Summer Pilgrimage. Together we'll follow the path of the Great Migration which formed under the weight of Jim Crow and became a 60-year movement of an estimated 6 million African Americans from the Southern U.S. to major cities, like Los Angeles, New York, and of course Chicago.

This movement had a profound impact on urban landscaping and it once again reshaped the dynamics of black families in America by having one of more members separate from the family unit with the intention of trekking ahead to make provisions for the family members they left behind--ideally, it was to be a mending migration. It took extraordinary acts and an intentional network of human beings--black, white, clergy, laity, friend, stranger, mother, father, brother, sister, etc.--that stretched across the nation to reinforce the longevity of the movement. Yet, for many, this movement was literally a life or death decision and even more so, the concrete meccas they ventured to often meet them with the same poverty and inequality they initially tried to outrun.

As I reflect on this period in American history I see a correlation between the Great Migration and the Exodus narrative; which I can only conclude that much like the Hebrews, each person that partook in this uncertain journey away from the South had to have faith that was greater than fear. And though this notion doesn't necessarily translate into a physical inheritance, it transcended decades and trickled down throughout generations.

Today, I am reminded more than ever that I am a descendent of the Great Migration and that I've inherited this priceless gift of unrelenting perseverance. A little over a month ago I lost my home to fire and in a way, I am now on a mending migration of my own. This experience left me homeless and naturally, fear presented itself. How will I rebuild? Where will I live? Where will I sleep? Can I survive this? Each question valid but with every day that passes, I have a greater understanding of faith over fear. More specifically, because I see the extraordinary in my own community--my Epiphany family and the many others who continue to show up on this journey of healing.

This is what I am carrying into our Summer Pilgrimage, my own unique understanding of faith. And I encourage our youth to do the same, so that we each can authentically seek and perhaps embrace what it means to step away from fear and welcome the unknown. I look forward to the journey and the many paths we'll take to reach our destination

Peace,

Shereetha Jackson,
Youth Ministry Coordinator

You Are Invited

An Invitation to Join

By Alix Janke

I'm a joiner, really. It's what I do. I join. I participate. And it's not difficult to understand why. I come from a proud line of joiners; the oft-told story is that my parents, in the years since their retirement, have "joined" so many volunteer activities that they fill more hours of their week than they ever spent in full time employment. Joining is the model I was provided, my way of understanding how I fit in the world.

It hasn't been that way my whole life, though. And I suppose it's not that surprising, either. I would categorize my late teens and early twenties as a period of active not-joining. Of not participating. Of taking away more than I put in. While that's not uncommon, it's taken some time to understand the effect that had on me – not only the not joining, but the not having a sense of being near too much of anything worth joining anyway. It was, so often, a very lonely feeling.

That's not the crux of what I'm here to say, though. And while I could write a whole separate article about how it is that on this meandering path of life I ended up at Epiphany, that's not really what I'm trying to do, either. I want to talk about what I do here, and why. And perhaps uncover some more of the invitation that was extended to me and that I want anyone who walks through our doors to experience in the way that works for them.

I had been visiting at Epiphany for a little over a year, at first sporadically and then with more regularity. I had friends here and met acquaintances along the way. I really liked the way we worshipped together and I wanted more, but in many ways I was still lurking around the edges. Feeling timid. Cynthia Hizer approached me and Wende Crow and (at least to my recollection) informed us that there was a need for ushers and that she was going to go ahead and sign us up for that. We were trained within the next two weeks and we still serve today. My inner welcomer delights at the opportunity to greet the parish and support the movements of our gathering together in worship.

The next summer, I finally dipped my toe into the choral waters by singing in the summer choir. Singing was a huge part of my early years; countless hours of my life were spent shuttling to choir rehearsals, voice lessons, performances. In those years of not-joining, singing was one of the first things I gave away. The welcome I experienced in those few weeks of summer singing was like another arm wrapping around me, embracing me in this place. I was reminded again how I feel closest to the divine in music. I couldn't wait to get more. As soon as I finished grad school in 2016 and my world opened up, I joined the regular choir. No stranger to saying yes, I joined the Hildegard ensemble a few months later.

When the invitation came to join vestry in 2017, I might have laughed a little into the phone. I thought to myself, "Man, they must really be scraping the bottom of the barrel if they're asking me!" I mean, I'm a joiner, but let's get real. I've been an Episcopalian for approximately one millisecond and I have never joined in the kind of way that might have an impact on any significant body of people. I felt wholly underqualified. Luckily the vestry – just like the parish it serves – is an extraordinarily gracious group of people working and walking together to support the life of an incredible church. I'm figuring out my role in it day by day. This year, I'm serving in the area of Membership and it is such a privilege. It feels like a natural extension of my joiner self. What can we do to invite others to join? To make this a space where even those who have been here many years feel continually invited?

And really, that's what participation at Epiphany does for me. Finding the spaces where my gifts align with a need gives me a sense of perpetual invitation to participate in the body of Christ, in the work of being the church in a difficult world. This is a place where I find solace, strength for the journey, and satisfaction in being part of both this community and something much, much larger. And I want, in whatever way I can, to be part of the invitation to you to find that for yourself here, however that looks. That, to me, is stewardship. To bring our gifts and share them, making something infinitely more powerful than the sum of the parts.

Capital Campaign Corner

June 2018 Update

By Katie Pedersen, Capital Campaign Committee

In March we made an application and appeared before the DeKalb County Historic Preservation Commission to request a (required) Certificate of Appropriateness to demolish the Byrd House. The request was granted with the stipulation that we submit another application for a Certificate of Appropriateness for a full campus landscape plan. We applied and appeared again before the DeKalb County Historic Preservation Commission in May. The second Certificate of Appropriateness was granted for our campus landscape plan, clearing the way for us (finally) to apply for a demolition permit.

The design for the campus landscape plan follows the guidelines of the Druid Hills Neighborhood Historic District. It includes new deciduous shade trees to supplement the canopy, as well as evergreen hedges, shrubs and annual flower beds for seasonal flowers and clippings for the Flower Guild's use. Check the Crossing Hall for the latest images of Epiphany's campus landscape plan.

It's worth noting that the Preservation Commissioner who moved to approve our landscape plan made a point of expressing how important this work is to the community – both for parish members and for non-members. Our location on Ponce de Leon Avenue makes Epiphany highly visible: "With declining enrollment in mainline churches across the country, it's more important than ever for churches to appear welcoming – to everyone. Investing in a lovely well-kept campus will go a long way toward welcoming the community to your church."

Mid-year giving statements will be delivered soon. Be sure to check to see that you're on track with your regular giving – but please also double-check to see that your commitment to our Gather | Strengthen | Flourish Capital Campaign is up to date. If you are new to the parish, or become interested in investing in Epiphany's Capital Campaign, please give Shea a call or talk with Benno or Sharon about ways that you can give.

Dear Epiphany Family

John and I both want to thank you for all the care which you have shown us as I recover from my broken bones. The benefit of the food has been immediate and obvious; John has hardly had to fix a meal. The benefits of the cards, visits, calls, and prayers may not be as obvious, but are no less real. Thank you for being such a sustaining Christian community.

Faithfully, Laura Keys

Epiphany's Expenses Don't Take a Vacation

Philip Anderson, Finance Committee Chair

Memorial Day, School's Out for the Summer (channeling Alice Cooper), Choir Break, Sunday School Hiatus, Vacation Bible School, 6 Flags, Concerts, the Pool, ALTA, Ball Games, Getting That Yard to Shine, Picnics, Road Trips, Reunions, 4th of July, Wimbledon, Tour de France, Getting Ready for School to Crank Back Up. What a list! No doubt you have some additions.

While all this seasonal "stuff" is happening, Epiphany's finances don't get much of a break. Those pesky clergy and staff salaries, utility bills, mortgage payments, diocesan pledge payments, and other bills keep having to be paid, even during the Summer Doldrums and Dog Days.

Updated pledge statements will be available shortly after the end of June. Please review your statements and other giving records and continue to keep your pledges up to date, especially during the Summer months. Your generosity makes all that is Epiphany possible.

Eucharistic Visitors Needed

Eucharistic Visitors, also known as Home Communion Ministers, extend the Eucharist beyond the church walls by taking the sacrament to sick or shut-in parishioners who cannot attend Sunday worship service.

The Pastoral Care committee is looking for volunteers to join this important ministry.

Eucharistic Visitors describe their personal experiences of bringing the holy sacrament and communion to others as being life changing and a gift to both the giver and the receiver. Through this ministerial call one often experiences a deeper relationship with God and a greater understanding of what it means to be a part of a spiritual community.

If you are interested in becoming a Eucharistic Visitor, please contact Pastoral Care vestry liaison Ann Fowler at annfowler@emmaushouse.org or 404.808.1864. No prior experience is necessary, but volunteers must attend a Eucharistic Visitor training at 10 a.m. on Sunday, June 24, offered by the Rev. Dr. Sharon Hiers.
